Supporting Marginalized Students on Commuter Campuses: Going Beyond the Classroom [WORKSHOP]

Instructors of commuter-student populations face a range of immediate challenges including supporting marginalized student needs, mobilizing available institutional resources, and creating meaningful spaces where students can share ideas and learn from one another. In this workshop, we will share our perspectives teaching at different institutions -- one more rural and one more urban -- regarding how to support LGBTQIA+ and DACA students specifically. We will instruct participants how to understand student identities and experiences and mobilize institutional resources. Student participants in our programs will also share their experiences with support structures created by sociologists.

Conscious Aging: Considerations of the Second Half of Life [DEMOCRACY CAFÉ]

People are living healthy lives much longer, opening opportunities for persons approaching the 'second half' of life to explore and create new ways to put their gifts and talents to work during their wisdom years. In this highly interactive Democracy Café, participants will engage in a provocative conversation about growing into the second half of life with intention and consciousness. The facilitators will set the stage by briefly introducing the topic and sharing trends and issues surrounding aging and expertise in the emerging fields. The goal of this Café is for you to come away with some new possibilities for thinking about, and hopefully better understanding, what the second half of life might offer you.

Unapologetically Sociological [DEMOCRACY CAFÉ]

In this Democracy Café, we discuss the backlash for speaking up and calling out social injustice, as well as the controversy over naming the structural causes of social violence (i.e. police shootings, school shootings, #MeToo, border patrols, family separation). We lead discussion about being unapologetic for pointing out the systemic failures that lead to social pain and violence. We will call out, among others, hegemonic masculinity, institutional racism, white fragility and hetero-patriarchy, in order to name structural causes that inevitably hold us all accountable.

Integrating Animals into Social Research [DEMOCRACY CAFÉ]
In this Democracy Café, we will discuss the centrality of animals to the lives of humans. Despite this centrality, this relationship and animals themselves are often ignored or under-examined by sociologists in the research process. We will explore, discuss and develop strategies on how to acknowledge the role animals play in human lives and how to incorporate this into research processes.

Teaching Sexuality: Social Construction Versus the Gay Gene, Can Sociology Bridge the Divide? [DEMOCRACY CAFÉ]
In the current socio-political climate, sexualities research and gender and sexual minorities are increasingly under attack. As sociologists and teachers of sociology, we need to understand how genetics and biological sciences construct gender and sexuality in order to effectively teach a sociological perspective to students who may subscribe to a biological essentialist view of sexuality. These include future medical professionals since the MCAT now requires introductory sociology. In this Democracy Café, we will engage in thoughtful conversation about how to teach about gender and sexuality from a sociological perspective while taking into account the frameworks of biological essentialism present.

Mega Farms, GMO Food Production, and the Future of the Guyana Shield [DEMOCRACY CAFÉ]
In this Café, we examine the intrusion of large scale Genetically Modified Foods (GMO) into the region of the Guyana/Brazil border, which is likely to negatively impact the environment, livelihoods and future of indigenous communities. We will examine existing and projected Mega Farms and their environmental threats to the fresh water, air quality, rich biodiversity and population of the area. Recent political changes in Brazil further challenge the ecological stability for the Guyana shield, which is a more than two billion year old geological formation that covers roughly 270 million hectares in the South American Countries of Guyana, Suriname, French Guiana, Venezuela and small parts of Colombia and northern Brazil.

Queer 101: What is Queer? [THEMATIC WORKSHOP]
Queer Theory is slippery like mercury. Although it is increasingly influential in sociology, it is difficult to define because it is interdisciplinary, eschews categorization and embraces fluidity. At its core, Queer Theory questions taken for granted assumptions about gender and sexuality but extends far beyond that. This workshop, then, embraces this complexity and provides an overview of Queer Theory and ways of making sense of it. It introduces attendees to queer concepts, theory and implications for research, teaching and identities.

Virtual Reality: A Hands-On Demonstration and Discussion of Its Use in the Classroom [WORKSHOP]

Virtual reality (VR) offers hope of increasing empathy through the ability to have immersive virtual experiences in someone else's body. In the past year, we have used VR in two separate sociology-based classrooms to provide students different mediums to interact with content related to gender, race, and class. Participants in this workshop will have the opportunity to experience some of the VR experiences we have utilized and learn how to implement VR in their classrooms. Challenges and key strategies to successfully implement VR will be discussed. Attendees will leave with materials, ideas, and tips for making their classrooms more interactive and engaging through the use of VR.

Doing Phenomenologically Informed Research in Sociology [WORKSHOP]
Society for Phenomenology and the Human Sciences Session

This workshop addresses the practice of phenomenologically informed research in sociology. Sociologists often think of phenomenological research as anti-scientific or as simply an attempt to understand the subjective perspectives of social actors. Articulated in these ways, phenomenology is seen as one of many "qualitative methods" and therefore has little to offer sociological researchers. This workshop will address the proper role of phenomenology in sociological research suggesting that it can inform both qualitative and quantitative research in ways that bring new insights to our understanding of the social word. A plan of action for phenomenologically informed sociological research will be presented.

Film Screening: All the Difference [FILM SCREENING]
MSS First Generation Task Force Session

Presider: Patricia Maddox, University of St Thomas

- Discussant: Patricia Maddox, University of St Thomas

Come view the powerful documentary film, All the Difference, directed by Tod Lending, and produced by Wes Moore and Joy Thomas Moore. This film traces the lives of two college bound first-generation, Black male students from the South Side of Chicago. Robert applies to Lake Forest College and Krishaun to Fisk University. Their college experiences are presented alongside the larger national statistics on student loans, retention and other issues facing first-generation students. The film follows Robert and Krishaun for five years to college graduation and beyond into the beginning of their future careers. Support from family, teachers, mentors, advisors combined with the sheer determination of these first-generation students paved their path to success. They both share a commitment to give back to their community and help other first-generation students, while discovering new life goals made possible by their college experience.

Job Market 101: Practical Tips for Strengthening Application Materials [WORKSHOP]
This workshop will provide participants with practical tips for crafting strong application materials (i.e., letters, teaching statements, research statements, talks/demos, documentation of teaching effectiveness) for different types of job audiences (i.e., R1, regional university, SLAC, community college). We acknowledge and explore the important differences within the academic job market required for different types of schools. In order to stand out in a competitive applicant pool one must ensure that their application materials are top notch.

Professors and Academic Administrators as Former First-Generation Students [WORKSHOP]

DRAFT

MSS First Generation Task Force Session

Some current professors and administrators were the first in their families to get a college degree and navigate the academic environment. This first-generation identity does not end once a college degree is obtained. This workshop will address the range of potential issues that first generation professors and administrators face in academia. As a group, we will outline some shared concerns and create concrete strategies for addressing these issues.

Gender Inequality in the Academy [DEMOCRACY CAFÉ]
While women now account for more than half (56%) of all undergraduate students and earn more than half (52%) of all PhD's nationwide, there are still clear gender inequalities within the academy. Women academics earn less than their male colleagues, are more likely to serve in non-tenure-track positions than men, and are less likely to advance to the rank of Full Professor than their male counterparts. Female faculty also report differential (often heavier and less prestigious) service and teaching loads, which may hamper their opportunities for career advancement. In this Democracy Café we will explore the complex factors that contribute to gender inequality in the academy, and the possible solutions to this persistent gender gap.

Managing Student Mental Health Disclosure [DEMOCRACY CAFÉ]
This Café will offer the opportunity for us to openly discuss the risks and benefits of student mental health disclosure in college. Recognizing that many students struggle with their mental health over the course of their college career, yet students with mental health issues face a great deal of stigma from their peers. The awareness that a student has a mental health problem also has the potential to negatively affect our interactions. It can be a challenge to maintain the educator role, while expressing concern and helping students navigate treatment options. As faculty, we can counter the stigma, model respectful interaction, and assist students as they reach out for help.

Questioning the New Poor People's Campaign's Capacity to Resolve "Evil" in America [DEMOCRACY CAFÉ]

In this Democracy Café, we consider the effectiveness of the New Poor People's Campaign. How can this campaign begin to resolve overwhelmingly large, systemic issues? The Poor People's Campaign of 1968, led by Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. called for change to what Dr. King called America's "triple evils:" racism, militarism, and economic exploitation. Today's New Poor People's Campaign seeks the same outcomes as the first, only taking a fourth "evil" into consideration--environmental degradation. While the leaders of the campaign know what they want--and what Dr. King wanted--they will need a comprehensive plan to change centuries' worth of "evil" in America.

Do Sociological Theory Courses Need the Canon? [DEMOCRACY CAFÉ]

In this Democracy Café, we will discuss how relevant and necessary Marx, Weber, and/or Durkheim continue to be in undergraduate sociological theory courses. Instructors of theory are tasked with the unenviable, and impossible, purpose of providing an overview of the history of sociology as a discipline, sociological theory (both classical and contemporary). At the end of the course, the goal is that sociology majors will be prepared to apply some level of sociological theory in their senior thesis projects. In this cafe, we will discuss whether or not spending less time on "canonical figures" and more time on the skills and processes involved in sociological theorizing may serve students better.
