Theme: “Left Behind Sociology”: Revisiting Old Ideas, Old Theories, and Understudied People

We’re in for an exciting meeting this year in my hometown. One of the first things you will notice is that Creighton University (my alma mater, my mother’s alma mater and my father’s employer) is right out our back door. We’re only a few blocks from Omaha’s nationally renowned Old Market and a vastly revitalized (and expanded!) downtown. Many of you who flew here I’m sure noticed how convenient our location is from the airport as well. When I compare where my hometown is now compared to what it was like when I lived in the dorms just up the street, the difference is simply amazing! (I’ll tell you more over a beer if you ask).

More to the point, we have over 100 regular paper sessions, and 11 workshops from every area of sociology. Our association has shown a serious commitment to coming to Omaha – every meeting room is occupied and we are (academically at least!) full to capacity.

Our program theme (“Left Behind Sociology”) is well represented with at least 10 sessions drawing inspiration from the thematic statement that was part of our Call For Papers.

Our program this year also has several distinctive features including:

- A free drink ticket to the first one hundred arrivals at the opening night party (Thursday April 3rd). And the first 200 guests will receive a free MSS coffee mug courtesy of The University of Iowa.
- Not one but two plenary presentations by world-renowned scholars John Holmwood (President of the British Sociological Society) and J. Craig Jenkins (Professor of Sociology and Political Science at The Ohio State University). Both will explicitly focus on the “left behind” theme.
- The Commons—an area near the book display featuring information on the graduate programs in the MSS region, highlighting the work of local NGOs, and highlighting the work of local employers.
- Tours of Boys Town (the legendary boys’ home featured in screen and cinema) and “Magic City,” the old South Omaha area that used to be the first stop for first-generation immigrants to the area.
- Teaching-and-Learning Sessions concentrated on Saturday, April 5th so that those who wish to hone their skills and who might otherwise have trouble getting away during the week can get maximum information in a minimal amount of time.

If you have any questions about things to do and places to go, please hunt me down or speak with our local arrangements co-chairs, Julie Pelton and Jean Karlen. They are old Omaha veterans as well and have a good idea what’s happening in our adopted town.

I would like to thank my hard-working program committee, listed inside the front cover, and my equally hard-working student director (Kim Maas) for helping to get the program together, and (of course!) Lauren Tiffany for keeping us on schedule and on task.

Enjoy the meeting and the magic of Omaha!

MFP Celebrates its 40th Anniversary in 2014!

The Minority Fellowship Program (MFP) supports the development and training of sociologists of color in any sub-area or specialty in the discipline. Funded by generous annual contributions from organizations such as the Midwest Sociological Society, as well as numerous individual donors, MFP seeks to attract talented doctoral students to ensure a diverse and highly trained workforce is available to assume leadership roles in research that are relevant to today's rapidly-changing world.

For 40 years, MFP has supported nearly 500 Fellows in pursuit of a doctoral degree in sociology. In addition to providing financial support, MFP works with its Fellows and their faculty mentors to help prepare Fellows for research careers through professional socialization and the building of networks.

The annual stipend for each MFP Fellowship award (August 1- July 31) is $18,000. In addition, arrangements for the payment of tuition is made with universities or departments. There are also limited funds available for travel to the ASA Annual Meeting each August, regional or aligned association meetings in the spring or fall, and professional development programs and training workshops.

The American Sociological Association is proud to call the Midwest Sociological Society a partner in MFP, and is pleased to recognize Joseph "Piko" Ewoodzie, the 2013-14 MSS MFP Fellow.

Congratulations to MSS and ASA for a Wonderful Partnership!

IOWA STATE UNIVERSITY

Department of Sociology

GRADUATE PROGRAM

The graduate program focuses primarily upon instilling an intellectual understanding of social factors and providing the methodological tools for students to function as social analysts that look beyond the façade of everyday life to understand the human components of alternate courses of actions and choices.

DEGREES

The Department offers MS and Ph.D. degrees in either Sociology or Rural Sociology. Graduate students may enter the program at the MS or PhD level depending on prior coursework. At the M.S. level, an emphasis is placed on core training in theory and methods. The MS student demonstrates mastery by conducting original research and completing a written thesis under the guidance of a major professor and two other POS committee members. For the Ph.D., the core content emphasizes advanced methodological skills, general theoretical orientations, and training in topical areas suiting students' research interests and the strengths among faculty.

AREAS OF SPECIALIZATION

The Department scholarship of learning, discovery, and engagement are clustered around three areas:

- Demographic change, crime, international migration, and economic development
- Human dimensions of agriculture and natural resource management

Social Thought and Research (STAR)

Social Thought and Research (STAR) is an annual peer reviewed journal edited by graduate students at The University of Kansas. We publish research papers, research notes, and book reviews on a range of subjects by faculty and advanced graduate students alike, including the research of leading social thinkers. The journal focuses on current issues in sociological studies and interdisciplinary social science-related research, and we also publish papers by authors from departments outside the discipline of sociology, such as women's studies, political science, anthropology, history, and American studies. Look for our upcoming edition on the topic of social resilience. STAR's new podcast, Social Thought, will feature interviews with leading sociologists and other exciting content.

Join Us! - We Can Change the World

Nebraskans for Peace is the oldest statewide peace and social justice organization in the US.

We promote the rights of all people and peaceful resolution of conflicts. On issues of military intervention and foreign policy, environmental, economic justice, GLBTQ, gender and racial equality, nonviolence education and capital punishment, NFP stands up for what is just and right. There is no peace without justice.

Nebraskans for Peace has earned a national reputation for its work on behalf of Peace & Justice. We believe the anger in the developing world (particularly Muslim nations) stems largely from economic injustice—much of it perpetuated by Western corporate interests. Climate Change will also harm people in those countries more quickly than in the US.

Please contact us at 402-453-0776 NFPomaha@NebraskansforPeace.org or www.NebraskansforPeace.org to talk about how we can work together.

The mission of the Masters of Arts Program in Sociology is to educate students in the core theoretical and methodological knowledge of the discipline providing grounding in both quantitative and qualitative methods. This training will prepare graduates to seek immediate employment in applied settings or to pursue a doctoral education.

From a social justice perspective, the department works to develop insights in our students about the effects of social structures on their personal lives and their communities. Parallel to this goal, faculty research focuses on issues such as teen dating violence, sexual minority well being, runaway youth, gentrification, educational policy, and caregiving in later life.

Application guidelines:

- The application deadline for Fall consideration is March 1. Students applying after the deadline will still be considered if openings in the program remain.
- Graduate Teaching Assistantships are available on a competitive basis with tuition reduction based on the number of hours worked per week.
- Both thesis and non-thesis degree options are available.
