Code of Ethics

Mirroring the American Sociological Association Code of Ethics, the Midwest Sociological Society Code of Ethics (hereafter “Code”) establishes the principles and ethical standards that guide the Society’s membership. This Code is a guideline and baseline for examining the professional activities of MSS members. These guidelines require MSS members and leaders to be honest and respectful of others in their professional activities. The Code also recognizes that MSS members need to adhere to the high standards of collegiality. Members of the MSS strive to eliminate bias in their professional activities, and they do not tolerate any forms of discrimination based on age, gender, race, socioeconomic status or origin, ethnicity, nationality, religion, sexual orientation, gender, gender identity, gender expression, disability, health conditions, political affiliation, marital status, domestic status, parental status, or any other applicable basis proscribed by law. As a regional association, we place value on dismantling power inequalities. We engage and respect diverse experiences through all our programmatic activities and in the business of the Society.

Welcome!

On behalf of the 2026 Program Committee and the conference planning leadership team, I am thrilled to welcome you to the Midwest Sociological Society's 89th Annual Meeting. Thanks to the hard work of the many people involved in this year's conference, including the hundreds of MSS members who submitted their research and presentation ideas, a diverse and engaging program awaits you over the next several days. Whether you have come to the conference to explore cutting-edge discoveries, to gather new ideas for inspiring students in the classroom, to learn about how sociological insights can guide community engagement or to connect and reconnect with other MSS members, you will discover a wealth of opportunities. I am so glad that you are here!

This year's conference centers on the theme of Care and the Sociological Vocation. Although they are often taken for granted, practices and relationships of care help to sustain social worlds. Care permeates families, organizations, social movements, and communities and represents an important topic of sociological research, a crucial medium for sociological engagement and an underexplored pathway to sociological knowledge. This year's theme challenges us to consider care's historical place in sociology and its contemporary relevance for our research, teaching and community engagement.

We will be joined by two plenary speakers who will help us engage this challenge. On Friday, Dr. Tracie Canada (Duke University) will present "All I Wanna Say is That/They Don't Really Care about Us." Drawing from ethnographic work with Black football athletes at Division 1 universities, Dr. Canada will discuss the various geographies of care that players rely on to navigate sporting and real worlds that are discriminatory and anti-Black. On Saturday, Dr. Valerie Francisco-Menchavez (California State University, San Francisco) will offer "Toward a Multitude of Care: Practices, Methods, and Solidarity in Times of Crisis." Dr. Francisco-Menchavez will report on a participatory research project conducted with Filipina care workers in San Francisco during the Covid-19 pandemic, offering a description and theorization of these workers' relational practices of radical care.

In addition to the plenaries, the conference will feature a wide range of paper presentations, panels, workshops, author-meets-critics sessions, and other events. Several sessions are especially targeted towards student attendees, including panels about succeeding in graduate school and discovering/recovering the joys of sociology, as well as our inaugural Students-Meet-Scholars roundtable networking event. For sociologists looking to cultivate professional skills, we are also offering a series of one-hour Sociologists' Craft workshops, focusing on topics ranging from mining social media for qualitative data to stewarding your time in the face of multiple professional demands. Please also stop by the MSS Commons during your time at the conference, which will host poster sessions and other activities, and don't miss the Welcome Reception and Trivia Night (Thursday evening), the MSS Presidential Address and Reception (Friday afternoon), and the Queer Mixer (Saturday evening). Finally, mark your calendars for the MSS State Directors' Meetings at noon on Saturday. This is a time to get to know the elected director who represents your state on the MSS Board and to share your ideas and concerns.

Beyond these planned events, our conference location offers a spectrum of opportunities for learning and exploration. We are meeting in St. Louis's iconic Chase Park Plaza Hotel, which has hosted celebrities ranging from sitting U.S. Presidents (including Lyndon Johnson and Jimmy Carter), musicians (including Elvis Presley and Harry Belafonte), and even professional wrestlers (including the memorably named Dick the Bruiser). A stroll around the hotel offers glimpses of this storied past, as well as examples of Art Deco architecture and a collection of original artworks displayed in public areas. In the meeting app and conference program, you'll also find information about attractions in the neighborhoods surrounding the hotel, including museums, restaurants, shopping, and walking trails in the beautiful Forest Park as well as information about scheduled tours.

This conference would not have been possible without the contributions and vision of several unique individuals. In her first year as an MSS Student Director, Brenna Jones fearlessly took the lead on organizing original programming, resources and amenities for our valued student attendees. With her extensive experience, deep understanding, and unflagging positivity, MSS Executive Director Jennifer Talarico spearheaded conference planning, making what could have been a source of anxiety into a joyful experience. Meeting Planner Sadie Pendaz-Foster deployed her organizational genius and thoughtful diplomacy to arrange the program schedule and communicate with conference participants, identifying and resolving problems with apparent ease. As Local Arrangements Chair, Linda Lindsey brought her love for and knowledge of St. Louis into the planning of tours, the creation of a local attractions guide, and the organization of the conference registration desk. This year's Director of Exhibits, Lai Sze Tso, contributed her ideas and energy to the organization of the MSS Commons. Finally, a big thank you to members of the 2026 Program Committee, to incoming student director Meghna Gogoi, and to 2027 President-Elect and Program Chair Ahoo Tabatabai.

On behalf of all of us, I wish you an engaging and productive conference!

Michael Haedicke, 2026 Program Chair

SESSION 7. WORKSHOP

LINDELL D

Thursday · 11:10 am–12:40 pm

UNGRADING THE UNESSAY: RETHINKING ASSESSMENT THROUGH CREATIVITY AND CHOICE

This interactive workshop will demonstrate how ungrading and alternative forms of assessment can work together to reimagine student evaluation. Instructors often shift one element of course design each term. Pairing ungrading with creative and open-ended projects like the “unessay” can transform not just assessment but also course engagement itself. Participants will go through a course redesign workshop that has them exploring samples of previous student work, reflecting on inclusive assessment design using the Universal Design for Learning (UDL) framework, and considering assessment alternatives like contract grading and reflective verbal process letters. Guided by a digital “ungrading journal,” attendees will leave with draft plans for adapting their own courses to integrate alternative grading and assessment strategies that foster student creativity, accountability, and empowerment.

SESSION 15. WORKSHOP

KINGSBURY

Thursday · 1:00 pm–2:30 pm

THE RETURN OF SALON FOR THE CURRENT AGE

Salon, literally meaning "larger reception room" in French, was developed in the 17th and 18th centuries as a space where women of high education hosted artists, writers, philosophers to engage socially in new ideas that in turn filtered through society. Today, I use this method with winning results in both my Applied Sociological Theory and my graduate Advanced Applied Sociological Theory courses. This workshop engages the method with attendees, recreating the experience via a shared reading and discussion, hands on activities that reach all types of learners and a feedback session at the end to culminate new ideas for the method. This method fosters deep connection between students and aids their fears of disseminating and critiquing social theory.

CRAFTING AN EFFECTIVE CURRICULUM VITAE

Professional Development Committee Session

As many hiring committee chairs can attest, curriculum vitae often vary significantly in their professional “presentation of self.” The focus of this interactive workshop is to provide ideas for polishing, revising, and updating a CV for an academic position. Rather than offering concrete “rules” of CV construction, we think through how to tell the stories of our academic selves during the workshop. Through analysis of samples and discussion of current trends for content, style, format, and length, this workshop provides an opportunity to consider how to best communicate our talents and experiences through a curriculum vitae.

DECOLONIZING “INTRODUCTION TO SOCIOLOGY” IN COMMUNITY COLLEGE: CONTEXT, THEORY, APPLICATION

Decolonizing the curriculum is at the forefront of contemporary sociological pedagogy. Community colleges face unique challenges when pushing the pedagogical envelope of the introductory class. We need to engage our students in a meaningful curriculum that honors the best of the traditional canon (to ensure transferability) and incorporates students’ lives and histories through the lens of sociology. Our students are diverse, but national politics are erasing their experiences. Decolonizing our introductory courses offers a corrective. The purpose of this moderated workshop is to create a space for sociologists in community colleges, or anyone else whose focus is the introductory class, to discuss practical applications for decolonizing our curriculum. The facilitators will present foundational and current thinking on decolonizing our discipline after which we will share in Q & A.

PUBLISHING IN ACADEMIC JOURNALS: TIPS AND TRICKS ON NAVIGATING THE PUBLISHING LANDSCAPE

Publications Committee Session

Publications are essential in academia, yet getting your work published in a journal poses a range of challenges that are not always easy to navigate. Desk rejects, peer review, editorial constraints, artificial intelligence, and Open Access publishing are some of many obstacles that arise leaving unanswered questions. This session will offer a comprehensive look at the current publishing landscape. Crafted with graduate students and early-career researchers in mind, James Carr of Taylor & Francis, will discuss the best ways to avoid a desk reject, requirements around A.I. use, and journal editor expectations, as well as address any specific concerns you might have. James has been an academic, a researcher, a managing editor of a journal, and now a publisher with T&F, offering a unique blend of perspectives to these various topics.

CALLING ALL FIRST GENERATION/WORKING CLASS STUDENTS PAST AND PRESENT

First Generation and Working-Class Committee Session

Based on feedback concerning First Generation student conference needs, we will gather again during the Past Presidents’ Social. Undergraduate and graduate students, college/university administrators, and faculty who also were first in their family to attend college and/ or from working-class backgrounds can meet one another. We will get to know each other, share stories, and provide informal mentoring over a hot beverage. Members of the First Generation and Working-Class Committee will be available for your questions and input. The First Generation and Working-Class Committee will also be holding its raffle drawing at this time. Join us for some First Gen Fun!

THRIVING IN GRADUATE SCHOOL: A HOW-TO SESSION FOR EARLY GRADUATE STUDENTS

Student Issues Committee Session

Just beginning your graduate journey and feeling uncertain about what’s ahead? You’re not alone! This session is designed for early graduate students who want to get a head start on making the most of their program. Our panel of later-stage graduate students and faculty will share practical advice on developing a thesis or research project, balancing coursework and professional development, and exploring career paths both inside and outside academia. We’ll also talk about building mentoring relationships, networking effectively, and managing the challenges of graduate life. Whether you’re thinking ahead to your thesis, considering your options after graduation, or just trying to find your footing, this workshop will offer honest insights and helpful strategies to set you up for success!

AN AI TOOLKIT FOR TEACHERS AND LEARNERS: USING AI TO ENHANCE THE SHARED LEARNING EXPERIENCE

Committee for Teaching and Learning Session

This interactive workshop invites educators to explore the potential of AI as a toolkit for enhancing both teaching and learning. Whether you're teaching online, face-to-face, or in hybrid formats, we'll cover practical and effective ways AI can support instructional goals without falling into the trap of student cognitive offloading or misuse. Rather than focusing on the challenges of generative AI, this workshop will highlight the possibilities: How AI can enrich course design, foster student engagement, and level the playing field for different types of learners. Participants will be introduced to integrative tools and be encouraged to reflect on how these tools might benefit their own courses and learning communities. Please bring your laptops or tablets for this hands-on, interactive, workshop!

Saturday · 10:30 am-12:00 pm

EVALUATION IS FOR EVERYONE: MAKING DATA MEANINGFUL

What if evaluation were not just a compliance task, but one of a sociologist's most powerful tools for connecting research and practice to real-world change? Too often, it is seen as a technical requirement for funders or a specialized task for data experts, rather than an integral part of everyday sociological practice. In reality, evaluation is a living process that links vision to action, action to learning, and learning to lasting impact. Aligned with the 2026 MSS theme on care and sociological vocation, this interactive workshop reframes evaluation as a practical, equity-driven, and people-centered process that embodies care by valuing lived experience, amplifying community voice, and fostering meaningful collaboration. During the session, participants will gain practical strategies and insights to: Recognize how evaluation is already embedded in your daily practice and connect it to powerful, people-centered frameworks; Enhance evaluation habits, both formal and informal, by integrating strategies that elevate community voice and advance equity; Apply strengths to transform feedback and data into actions that drive meaningful, real-world impact. You will leave ready to put evaluation into action, strengthening your practice while intentionally connecting every decision to the values and impacts that matter most.

SESSION 127. THEMATIC WORKSHOP

KINGSBURY

Saturday · 10:30 am–12:00 pm

TEACHING TRAUMA AND HUMANITY IN SOCIOLOGY

Teaching workshops entitled “Teaching Difficult Topics” have proliferated in the past decade, attempting to provide educators with ways to discuss socially “tough” topics, pointing to specific subject areas, especially those considered “political.” Sociologists research and teach science that regularly becomes politicized and manipulated. These ideas can become short social media bytes leading even well-intentioned students and educators to give abbreviated explanations. Sociologists are faced daily with these politicized and reduced versions of our science, but we also must recognize that our science directly deals with human oppression, violence, and intergenerational traumas. Despite political polarization, confidence in the discipline and in sociologically proven truths is the way to teach any topic. In this workshop we will discuss how to guide students to research these questions for themselves while fostering an environment that respects the dignity and humanity of those included sociological research that we teach. We will discuss how to be trauma-informed and thoughtful in pedagogy from syllabus to discussion activities in ways that help instructors as they, too, engage in teaching topics that include and shape their own human experience.

SESSION 150. WORKSHOP PORTLAND Saturday · 2:50 pm–4:20 pm

EVERYTHING IS SOCIOLOGICAL: USING THE SOCIOLOGICAL IMAGINATION TO PREPARE COMMUNITY COLLEGE STUDENTS FOR TRANSFER, CAREER, AND EVERYDAY LIFE

Most community college students encounter sociology by chance, often to fulfill a general education or program requirement. For many, it will be the only sociology course they ever take. How can we use this single opportunity to help students develop a lasting sociological imagination? How can we use this opportunity to help them carry sociology beyond our classrooms? This interactive session explores strategies for making sociology not only relevant, but essential, to students across diverse academic and career paths. Workshop facilitators will share and discuss practical approaches for sparking curiosity, connecting course material to the lived experiences of students, and fostering critical thinking that endures. In the spirit of collaboration, attendees are encouraged to bring their own ideas and examples. A shared Google Doc will be created during the session for ongoing resource exchange to extend after the session ends.

PHOTOVOICE AND DATA WALKS: INTERACTIVE WORKSHOP

This session is an interactive professional development workshop that offers insights and tips for those who want to learn more about photovoice and data walks.

Researchers with the University of Missouri conducted a study that explored the lived experiences, narratives, and values that shape rural Missouri life and inform peoples' perceptions of their communities' well-being and ability to thrive. In this presentation, we outline the ways we conducted and analyzed photovoice methods and how we shared findings through data walks. Photovoice is a participatory visual research method where participants use photography and narrative to document their community's strengths and concerns. Data walking is an interactive presentation approach in which researchers display findings in visual images in "stations" around a room to encourage people to engage and interpret information as they walk around a space. Examples of how photovoice and data walks can be included in teaching contexts will also be discussed.

ENHANCING SCHOLARLY TEACHING: PUBLISHING AND LEARNING WITH TRAILS

TRAILS is a resource that is included with your ASA membership. TRAILS is a place to find a range of peer-reviewed activities, assignments, and syllabi to help support scholarly teaching. Further, publishing on TRAILS allows you to demonstrate scholarly teaching. In this workshop, participants will leave with the start of something they can develop and submit to TRAILS. Participants will learn about TRAILS, the publication criteria TRAILS uses, and tips for making a successful submission. Attendees will learn about the qualities of a strong submission.
