WELCOME

Welcome to Omaha, Nebraska—home of the College World Series, one of the world’s best zoos, and folks who “don’t coast”! We hope that you can squeeze in some time to experience the great food, music, and entertainment that Omaha offers in between all of the amazing sessions, plenaries, and social gatherings we have scheduled for the 83rd Annual Meeting of the MSS!!

This year’s program features paper sessions, panels, workshops, roundtables, and poster events that cover the full range of subject matter in our field – thanks to your participation in the conference, there is something for everyone! I’m very pleased to announce that the program contains thematic sessions in nearly every timeslot, new “Academics Meet Activists” and “Teaching Technique” sessions, an unprecedented number of sessions on teaching, alternative presentations such as Pecha Kucha and democracy cafés, and the return of the Three Minute Thesis (3MT) student competition. In addition to all of the enriching professional sessions, the meetings also feature the usual MSS social gatherings – with a twist! Don’t worry, Trivia Night and the Welcome Social haven’t changed. Neither has the Presidential Reception. But we’ve scheduled the Ice Cream Social and Business Meeting for noon-1:00 so that everyone has a chance to join the festivities and discuss the status of MSS and its initiatives. During the Business Meeting on Saturday at noon, we’ll present MSS Awards and recognize the indispensable work of committee members, committee chairs, and the board of directors. Please plan to attend so you can meet MSS leadership and thank them for the work they do to keep our organization going. Oh, and did I mention there will be light snacks provided?

The theme for this year’s meetings, “Sustainable Sociology,” was chosen purposefully for its dual meaning. 2020 is an important year in the movement to address global climate change and I believe that Midwest Sociologists can play a strong role in catalyzing our discipline to act on climate and other environmental issues. Therefore, the program intentionally features discussions of environmental issues relevant to the Midwest and the work of prominent environmental sociologists from the region. The theme also allows us to talk about what it means to sustain sociology as a discipline. Those interested in this meaning of the theme will find an impressive number of sessions that address strategies for creating sustainable sociology programs, supporting working-class and first-generation students, faculty, and practitioners, sustaining sociology in the current political and economic environment, helping students build careers with a degree in sociology, supporting adjunct and part-time instructors, and more!

Interested in focusing on the theme during the conference? Consider attending all of the Sustainable Sociology Symposia on Friday and Saturday in Hill. Each Symposium consists of two back-to-back sessions on Teaching Sustainability, Sustaining Sociology Programs, and Sustainability on Campus.

We’ve also planned for several innovative plenary sessions this year. Our opening plenary will feature a documentary film, Dreaming of a Vetter World, and highlight Midwest efforts to promote organic farming. The screening and panel discussion will feature Nebraska farmers David Vetter and Fred Kirschenmann and environmental sociologist Monica Snowden. We’ll highlight important thematic issues such as climate change and sustainable food production. Organic popcorn from Vetter’s Grain Place Foods will be served! Our second plenary event is a panel discussion of “The 2020 Midwest Sociology Challenge: Lead on Climate”. Joane Nagel, Tom Dietz, Pancho McFarland, and Jules Bacon will share their experiences working on environmental issues and provide a vision for how MSS members can contribute to this challenge to “lead on climate.” Academic, activist, and author Bill McKibben will join us virtually for a Sustainable Sociology Symposium Lecture titled “The Biggest Thing We’ve Ever Done.” And, MSS President Tom Gerschick will deliver his address on “The Intersection Avoided: Disability Confronts Sociology.”

In keeping with the theme, we’re trying to make MSS meetings more sustainable. Please do your best to reduce, reuse, and recycle while at the hotel this year and look for more zero-waste practices in the future. Keep an eye out for opportunities to recycle your name badge and be entered into a contest for free membership next year!

Many thanks to all who worked so hard to make this conference a success! In particular, I would like to thank the 2020 program committee for their indispensable support and advice, Michael Miner for providing new directions for student initiatives, Sadie Pendaz-Foster for her institutional memory and careful attention to the important details, and Jennifer Talarico for being an irreplaceable sounding board every step of the way. Special thanks to Local Arrangements Chair Jay Irwin for arranging two tours this year – a return trip to BoysTown that was very popular when the meetings were held in Omaha last and “Undesign the Redline,” an interactive exhibit exploring redlining and residential segregation in Omaha.

And thanks to you for your participation in the Annual Meetings – the MSS members are truly what make this organization great!

Boys Town

9:00 AM – 11:30 AM

$15 per person

Meet in the lobby near the front door at 8:45 AM. The bus will leave the hotel at 9:00 AM and return at 11:30 AM

Boys Town's mission is to provide a place of support and safety for at-risk children and their families. Founded in 1917 by famed Father Edward Joseph Flanagan, who ministered to the homeless on the streets of Omaha, the work of the organization was profiled in a 1938 movie titled "Boys Town." Boys Town is now one of the largest non-profit child-care agencies in the country, providing assistance to over 2 million people each year. Though there are locations all across the United States, the national headquarters remain in Omaha. We will tour the campus, learning about the history of the organization, stopping at several main attractions like the Father Flanagan house and museum. After touring the Boys Town campus, individuals affiliated with the research institute will discuss current social science projects, the role of social scientists and research analysts in the organization, and the contributions made to scientific literature on topics related to child and family interventions.

Saturday, April 4

Undesign the Redline

Noon – 2:00 PM

$15 per person

Meet in the lobby near the front door at 11:45 AM. The bus will leave the hotel at noon and return at 2:00 PM

The Union for Contemporary Art's exhibit "Undesign the Redline" is an interactive exhibit, workshop series, and curriculum exploring the foundations of structural racism and the lingering effects of Redlining. The exhibit focuses on the historical events surrounding Omaha's Near North and South sides that resulted in systematically segregated communities through prohibitive and discriminatory home lending practices. In Omaha, and cities across the country, red lines were literally drawn on city maps by the federally-funded Home Owners' Loan Corporation, identifying predominantly African-American and immigrant communities as "hazardous" and unfit for investment.

2020 CERTIFICATES

MSS is offering two certificates this year. By completing the certification process you will be able to document and will be recognized for your participation in sessions focused in the certificate area. In order for you to receive a certificate, you need to attend 5 sessions (verified by a signature from the session presider or facilitator at the end of each session you attend) and write a brief reflection on your experience.

The MSS Certificate of Applied Sociology is organized by the Sociological Practice Committee. This certificate provides a structure for you to focus your conference participation, build your vitae and recognize areas that deeply relate to applied sociology work.

The MSS Certificate of Teaching and Learning is organized by the Committee on Teaching and Learning. This certificate provides the opportunity to engage in sessions related specifically to teaching and learning, education and pedagogy, curriculum development, classroom management, and teaching techniques for specific topics.

For more information about the certificate process or to pick up a complete roster of eligible sessions for these certificates, please stop by the MSS Registration Desk.

THE COMMONS

When the MSS Commons was created seven years ago, the space was envisioned as a central location for meeting attendees to gather, socialize, and interact with affiliated groups. It is more than an exhibit space for book publishers – it has become a place for state sociological societies, graduate programs, and other sociological organizations to meet MSS members. This year, we decided to ensure that the Commons was centrally located so that it can serve as a hub for conference activity. And we've got some exciting innovations in the space that we hope you'll take advantage of!

- “Soft” seating (a.k.a. couches!) will provide a comfortable place to meet up with friends and colleagues to continue conversations
- Interactive demonstrations from local environmental nonprofits – check out the schedule posted outside the Commons when you get to Omaha
- Plenty of roundtables to work at or socialize
- Games available to check out and play when you need to decompress just a bit

BE SURE TO JOIN US IN THE COMMONS
THROUGHOUT THE MEETING!

FOSTERING COMMUNITY AND TRANSFORMATIVE JUSTICE USING CIRCLES IN THE COLLEGE CLASSROOM

Facilitator — Carlene Sipma-Dysico, Lewis University

- Talking circles are increasingly used for restorative justice practices in juvenile detention facilities, mentoring organizations, reentry programs for formerly incarcerated persons, elementary and secondary schools, and many other places. Adapted from North American indigenous talking circles, this process brings people together on an equal footing to resolve conflict, develop trust, and build relationships. In the college classroom, community building provides a more equitable environment that supports learning, and increases student belonging and engagement. This workshop will include participation in an abbreviated circle, information on how circles can be incorporated into a variety of sociology courses, and student feedback of circle participation.

43. [DEMOCRACY CAFÉ]FRIDAY • 8:30 AM-10:00 AM*BLACKSTONE B*HOW CAN SOCIOLOGISTS ENGAGE COMMUNITIES FOR SYSTEMS-LEVEL CHANGE?Facilitator — Mike Stout, Oklahoma State University

- Systemic inequities pose substantial barriers to opportunity and social mobility for people from disadvantaged and under-resourced communities. Given the disciplinary focus of sociologists on intersectionality (e.g., race, gender, and class), institutions, and complex systems dynamics, we are uniquely positioned to work with communities on systems-level approaches to public problem solving. Participants in this session will engage in a facilitated dialogue and discussion of strategies for incorporating sociological theory, methods, and practice into collective action and systemic approaches to social change.

45. [DEMOCRACY CAFÉ]FRIDAY • 8:30 AM-10:00 AM*BLACKSTONE B*SEEKING THE SOUL OF AMERICA: EXPLORING THE VALUES, PRINCIPLES AND MORALITY OF AMERICA IN A TIME OF NATIONAL UPHEAVALFacilitators: Elaine Millam, Graceful PassagesMarlynn May, Texas A&M Health Science Center

- We are wrestling with how to respond to a growing negativism and cultural malaise in America. Arthur Brooks (2019) refers to our current malaise as a “culture of contempt,” though there are many labels for it. Our discussion is not grounded in the current President’s “make America great again” theme, nor do we contend that our current President, alone, has created it. We believe that America’s current malaise is a product of the last 50+ years of our history. Our conversation will focus on three guiding queries: 1). What were and are the fundamental values and commitments that constitute the heart and soul of America? (Jon Meacham, The Soul of America, 2018); 2). What are current indicators that the “higher angels” (Lincoln’s Gettysburg Address) of America’s soul have been/are being obscured?; 3). What commitments will we, as Americans, make to replenish America’s soul and manifest America’s higher angels?

46. [DEMOCRACY CAFÉ]FRIDAY • 8:30 AM-10:00 AM*BLACKSTONE B*REWARD FOR MISSING PET: LOCATING ANIMALS IN SOCIOLOGICAL CURRICULUM AND RESEARCH*Facilitator — Candace Korasick, University of Missouri Columbia

- Although interest in research and teaching about non-human animals outside of biology has increased in recent decades, sociology still seems hesitant to embrace their place in society. We tend to teach courses on “Animals & Society” or “Animals in Society,” but don’t think of animals as an everyday part OF human society. According to the American Pet Products Association, more than 68% of American households have at least one pet, and those households spend nearly $70 billion on their companions. As such, we need to have earnest discussions about including nonhuman animals as a routine part of sociological scholarship.

47. [DEMOCRACY CAFÉ]FRIDAY • 8:30 AM-10:00 AM*BLACKSTONE B*FINDING THE BALANCE: BEING A GRADUATE STUDENT IN 2020*Facilitator — Sarah Frank, University of Wisconsin-Madison

- Many colleges and universities have implemented First Generation support programming. Come share the programming ideas that have worked for your institution. Are there any concerns that the idea of First Generation support in the academy will lose its trending focus? What still needs to be accomplished to ensure First Generation success? The facilitation of this workshop will lead us to come up with strategies that can help keep First Generation program sustainable for future generations that may still need this support. Come join us in this great session!

SUSTAINING SOCIOLOGY IN AN AGE OF AUSTERITY AND UNCERTAINTY

Facilitators: Lisa Kort-Butler, University of Nebraska-Lincoln

Liz Legerski, University of North Dakota

- Sociology and social science programs across the region seem to be on the proverbial chopping block where budgets are tight or funding streams uncertain. This problem is confronted by institutions of all sizes. Combined with the reality that the college age population will decline over the next decade, these challenges are likely to persist for some time. In this Democracy Café, we facilitate conversation about what faculty and departments are doing to resist—and even thrive—in such environments. The conversation is an opportunity to learn about what strategies have been successful and what approaches are planned for the future.

67. [SYMPOSIUM WORKSHOP]FRIDAY • 10:15 AM-11:45 AM*HILL*A CLIMATE CHANGE MODULE FOR INTRODUCTION TO SOCIOLOGY CLASSESFacilitator: Andrew Szasz, University of California Santa Cruz

- At its best, Sociology is concerned with the most important problems of modernity. Today, climate change looms as the greatest of such problems. Students starting college will live the rest of their lives in the shadow of this profound threat to global human society. Showing students how sociological analysis can deepen understanding of climate change, demonstrates to them the relevance and the power of sociology, and helps them better understand the threat of climate change. Introduction to sociology courses are one of the best academic sites for undergraduates to learn about climate change, its causes, its likely societal and ecological impacts, how the public and political systems have dealt (or have failed to deal) with the threat. In this workshop, I display and explain a teaching module I created for instructors wishing to add climate change content to their introduction to sociology courses.

The teaching module is available at: <https://szasz.sites.ucsc.edu/>

- In this workshop, we discuss how to help sociology students prepare for non-teaching professional careers. We explore strategies students can use to identify and demonstrate skills developed through the sociology major and market themselves for a variety of non-teaching careers from business to government to nonprofits to human services to social action. We discuss how we can help students to articulate the sociological advantage for such jobs in cover letters, resumes, and interviews, and what characteristics are found in effective, career building service-learning projects, internships, volunteer work and part-time non-or para-professional jobs.

This film traces the lives of two college bound first-generation, Black male students from the South Side of Chicago. Robert applies to Lake Forest College and Krishaun to Fisk University. Their college experiences are presented alongside the larger national statistics on student loans, retention and other issues facing first-generation students. The film follows Robert and Krishaun for five years to college graduation and beyond into the beginning of their future careers. Support from family, teachers, mentors, advisers combined with the sheer determination of these first-generation students paved their path to success. They both share a commitment to give back to their community and help other first-generation students, while discovering new life goals made possible by their college experience.

I LOVE SOCIOLOGY, BUT WHAT CAN I DO WITH IT? HELPING STUDENTS TRANSLATE EXCITING SOCIOLOGY MAJORS INTO SUCCESSFUL CAREERS

Alpha Kappa Delta Session

Facilitator: Jeff Chin, Le Moyne College

- In this session, program leaders and faculty consider strategies that will help sociology students prepare to successfully enter the labor force. Our perspective suggests that faculty can make these modifications in courses and curricula without reducing the rigor and analytical focus of the undergraduate major and without committing to time-consuming course revisions. We draw on research that focuses on skills that employers want (e.g. National Association of Colleges and Employers' Career Readiness Competencies) and sociology graduates' first labor market experiences (e.g. Senter et al. 2015). This session builds on the material published in The Sociology Major in the Changing Landscape of Higher Education (Pike et al. 2017) and much of it draws from an article in Teaching Sociology, "Linking Sociology Majors to Labor Market Success" (Ciabattari et al. 2018).

- The Sociology Action Network (SAN) is a new initiative of the American Sociological Association designed to assist and empower not-for-profit organizations by giving them access to pro bono experts in sociology. This ASA Workshop will describe what SAN is, why it was established, and how you can become involved in and benefit from SAN. The workshop will begin by addressing the principles that guide SAN projects and the motivations for becoming a SAN volunteer. It will then provide a brief overview of best practices when working with community organizations to establish mutually respectful relationships that truly benefit the communities while avoiding the pitfalls that can beset even well-intended efforts. Some examples of typical organizations and collaborations will be discussed. Any PhD sociologist who is an ASA member and wants to volunteer may sign up to participate in SAN.

2019-20 ASA MINORITY FELLOW

Each year, MSS sponsors a Minority Fellowship Program (MFP) Fellow with the American Sociological Association. Join us in welcoming the 2019-2020 Fellow, Malissa Alinor.

MALISSA ALINOR, UNIVERSITY OF GEORGIA

Malissa is a PhD candidate at the University of Georgia, where she also earned a master's degree in sociology. She graduated summa cum laude with a bachelor's degree from the University of Florida. Malissa's mixed-methods dissertation explores the affective components of racial discrimination. This project draws on interview data from persons of color as well as white individuals to map and understand the emotions that accompany experiencing, recounting, witnessing, or even enacting racial discrimination. She is also using experimental methods to examine how these racialized emotions lead to action or inaction. Her research interests also include the consequences of stereotypic perceptions and the effectiveness of strategies aimed at reducing those perceptions. For her master's thesis, funded by the University of Georgia Research and Engagement in Diversity grant, Malissa used experimental methods to test how clothing attire influences the threatening perception of black men. In addition, she is a part of an ongoing research collaboration to understand the effects of sexual misconduct policies, of which she is co-author on a paper published in the Journal of Interpersonal Violence.

DEPARTMENT OF SOCIOLOGY UNIVERSITY OF MINNESOTA

A Department of the COLLEGE OF LIBERAL ARTS

What sets our program apart?

Through the exploration of social and individual dynamics, we prepare our students to enrich social scientific understandings of the complex problems societies face today. Sociology at the University of Minnesota offers a PhD program covering the fundamentals of sociological theory and methods, emphasizing the mastery of central literatures and debates, conduct of research, and teaching and policy application. Students receive funding packages that support them for 5 years and benefit from advanced training through seminars, research and teaching assistantships, and instructorships.

What really sets our sociology community apart is the broad range of issues our faculty and graduate students study. Much of this research, transdisciplinary and transnational in scope, expresses a strong sense of civic engagement and a dedication to addressing the pressing problems of our times.

Our research specialties include:

Demography, Family & Life Course
Inequalities & Culture

Global, Transnational & Comparative Sociology
Law, Crime, Punishment & Human Rights

What are our graduate students doing?

Our PhDs find jobs in education at a wide range of institutions, from research universities in the U.S. and worldwide to small liberal arts colleges. Other alumni hold research positions in government and non-profits. During their time at Minnesota, graduate students transition from consumers of knowledge to producers of knowledge, capable of shaping the world in whatever path they pursue.
